Shoes: In 1900 FJ Daw set up a general store in a tent, in the prospector's camp called Hawks Nest. When the town of Ravensthorpe was gazetted, Francis Daw built a store in the main street and the family still own and run the only general store in town. A treasure trove was discovered one day in a back room of the shop, a priceless collection of brand new shoes, many still in boxes, dating back to the early 1900s. The shoes were donated to the Ravensthorpe Museum and represent one of the most important items in the collection.
