

Toys: In the early days of the gold-rush in Ravensthorpe, children played with empty tins, knuckle bones and gum nuts – unless their families skilfully crafted homemade toys. The Ravensthorpe Museum is lucky to have been given some early examples of these ingenious toys.

The little horse is weighted so that it rocks when the front hooves balance on a solid object

Tin soldiers were always popular

